

The Relationship between Intercultural and Religious Thinking

Summary

The conception of interreligiosity is discussed in respect to the discourse of sociology of religion. Each religion distinguishes oneself with the peculiar complex of symbolical significations which is related with the particular culture and in the broader context with the similar or with the heterogeneous civilization. So why an analysis of the interreligiosity is inevitable connected with the research of the interculturality.

The traits of afore – mentioned conceptions are the most investigated by the scientists – Thomas Luckmann, Peter Berger, Niklas Luhmann, Michael Fleischer - of the social constructivism branch of sociology. Basing on it the author of an article examines general features of interculturality, interreligiosity conceptions which reveal itself mutual relationship between culture and religion.
